Overall

General, high-level feedback:

I like it.

Again, the English feels a bit off (the worst offenders: "create education", "sweetener bolted on top", but there are some others), but since the audience are not native speakers either, it probably won't be as big a problem as it would be in Dubai. Before Dubai, I insist on having it reviewed by a native speaker. Language use in English is a very powerful signal of education and competence. In this regard, education is very different from the IT workplace.

Screenshots are in: https://ws.baldvin.net/f/26640/home/baldvin/ws/EducationMatters/CompyVisual/COMPY_VISUAL_ELEMENTS/Compy_games_screenshots - please replace the current ones with real ones (figure out which one is which there)

Page 1

- A pilot offer → A pilot offer for schools

Page 2

- "gamifed sweeteners bolted on top" - “remove bolted on top”
- Neurodivergence is the norm, not the exception. The child who races ahead should not be slowed to the middle. → maybe add another line on other types of neurodivergence than “a child prodigy”? e.g. about individualizing pacing and not forcing particular social patterns
- Make "I am capable of creating" bold for emphasis. It should stand out as the most important phrase on the slide.

Page 3

- a turtle → a robot (we’ve replaced turtle)
- A real LEGO robot → a real robot (don’t use 3rd-party trademarked names in the presentation)
- “never siloed” → remove these two words (unclear)

Page 4

- Three lessons, one slide each → Sample lessons

Page 5

- turtle → robot
- Actual maze interface screenshots:
    - maze-control.png: press W — the robot moves one square west
    - maze-plan.png: type the whole path: 2N2W2N
    - maze-go.png: press Enter — it runs, and reaches the goal

Page 6

- Actual draw interface screenshots:
    - draw-blank.png: a blank canvas
    - draw-face.png: the robot leaves a trail

Page 7

- a LEGO robot on the table → a robot on the floor

Page 8

Page 9

Page 10

Page 11

- “intertwined” adds some context to “never siloed” so we can probably keep it here

Page 12

Page 13

Page 14

Page 15